FEATURE: This classic was found disassembled and the parts were piled inside the car. Our customer Rich took this Thunderbird project head on! He went through a complete restoration in just a few months. This vehicle is now restored and ready to take flight again! Thanks Rich for allowing us to be a part of your '55 Thunderbird project. We appreciate your business and your feedback. Thanks for sharing photos. We enjoyed seeing the final outcome!

TESTIMONY: "I am writing this letter about my dealings with Joe at Reds Parts Attic, I own a '55 T Bird, I pick up this car in February, It needed a 95% restoration, most of the parts were piled in the car. After a few weeks out we were looking at the bumpers and they were really in bad shape, I took them to a chrome guy 60 miles from us, he said the front one could be done and no way the rear could be saved with a 2x3 inch hole in it, find a better one and he would take a look at it. You can't find a '55 bumper in good shape just lying around. I found Joe's ad on a web site and called, we spoke, and I sent him pictures, He said that he could fix them up and quoted me a price. He had them picked at my door, When they arrived he looked them over and called me. He said the price was what he quoted, and I gave him the OK to repair my bumpers. I'm ending this story as not to bore you, he did a great job, 5 weeks later my bumpers back home and on the car. When everyone saw them they asked where I got my new bumpers from, I told them they were my old ones, no way they said. Thanks for a great job. Rich. N.Y.

HISTORY: Ford started production of the Thunderbird in 1955. There were 16,155 Thunderbirds sold in its first year. That year Ford sold more Thunderbirds than Chevy did Corvettes. Thunderbird's outsold Corvette's 23 to 1 in 1955. We're glad we can help in bringing these classics back to new life! Let us help with your restoration project. I'm confident our crew will do a great job for you!

SHARE YOUR PROJECT: Send us pictures and a short description of your project for a chance to be featured in a future Newsletter!
